SPAIN LOS ENAMORADOS, IBIZA

This white-washed former hostel sits atop a row of blue-painted fishermen's huts, tickled by the gentlest of waves. The sprawling waterside terrace acts as bar, restaurant and sun deck for guests – the type of well-travelled 30-somethings who have been told about this hotel's extraordinary mid-century-tropical aesthetic. They gather with clued-up locals feasting at long tables – Portinatx is a fishing village at heart, and the menu of fish tacos and seared pulpo relies heavily on the local catch. By evening, they'll be sipping Piña Coladas at the bar, which is thatched with faded palm fronds and lined with sheepskin-topped stools. The interiors are a collage of colour, texture and artful precision; each bamboo chair in just the right spot, each slatted line of shade falling just so.

Off a long, open-sided corridor are nine jewel-coloured bedrooms, where pile rugs and raffia wall hangings create a throwback-motel vibe. Rooms – on the small side, but with private sea-view balconies – are decked out with burnt-orange curtains, cornflower-blue tiles and huge triple-mattress CocoMat beds. Dinky bathrooms are facelifts of the originals, so don't expect colossal showers or fancy basins. But like all other things here, they're so chic you can't look away. FLASH POINT Everything in the hotel is for sale. From the chartreuse Ligne Roset Togo sofa to the North African blankets, kilim rugs and wicker bar trolley. Just add it to the bill. +34 971 33 75 49; losenamoradosibiza.com. Doubles from about £190
